

Feedback on I Am That Kind of Girl

Dear Lorelei,

You have written a beautiful “I Am” poem. One thing that makes it unique is the wording you chose to begin every line with: “I am that kind of girl.” How did you choose these particular words?

Everything you say about yourself has to do with the natural world, except for the first line. Isn't that interesting? It really interests me. It makes your first line very, very special. Also, you chose to use the word “like” until the last line when you used the word “love.” When you do that it makes the reader really pay attention to the difference.

I would love to have a copy of your poem in your handwriting if you have the chance to write it a second time. If you illustrated it I would be even more appreciative to have an illustrated copy.

Great job on your poem!

Love,
Anne
